Child Psychiatric Access Network (CPAN)

CPAN is a network of child psychiatry access centers that will provide child and adolescent behavioral health consultation services and training opportunities for pediatricians and primary care providers.

Why CPAN?

- There is a barrier for behavioral health services due to the shortage of child psychiatrists.
- Children are more likely to see a Primary Care Physician or Pediatrician when they are experiencing challenges with their behavior.
- CPAN takes a peer learning approach in providing care for children and adolescents with behavioral health needs.

Our goal is to EMPOWER Pediatricians and Primary Care Providers with guidance on mental health treatment options

How does CPAN work?

Our network is composed of 12 regional hubs, each equipped to provide consultation to physicians concerning children's mental health needs.

Upon enrollment your facility will be assigned to 1 hub who will keep all record of patient inquiries to ensure history and current treatment methods are accounted for.

If you'd like to consult a mental health provider on a patient's behavioral issues just pick up the phone and call your regional hub where you will receive a consultation on patient issues, connection to an active and available resource, or connect you to a child psychiatrist within 30 minutes of making your call.
